

Pre-Nursing Pathways to Traditional Nursing Bachelor of Science in Nursing

First Time in College Freshmen

The Bachelor of Science in Nursing (BSN) program at FIU is a limited access and highly competitive program. Students typically apply for full admission after completing prerequisite courses, an entrance exam, and other requirements.

FIU offers a Pre-Nursing Pathway for First Time in College (FTIC) applicants to help guide their journey toward full admission into the BSN program.

Admissions

- A limited number of FTIC applicants will be accepted directly into the BSN program in their first year as "Pre-Nursing" majors. FTIC students who are admitted to the BSN program as "Pre-Nursing" majors must meet all academic milestones in order to remain enrolled in the program and will be eligible for automatic full admission to the BSN program if/when they meet the minimum progression requirements.
- FTIC applicants who are not accepted as a "Pre-Nursing" major in the BSN program may be accepted to the alternative major selected on their application and flagged with a "Pre-Nursing Pathway" designation. If they meet pre-nursing academic milestones, these students will have the opportunity to apply for full admission to the BSN program upon completion of pre-requisite courses, an entrance exam, and other application requirements. Note that admission is not guaranteed and is highly competitive as a very limited number of seats are available.
- Students can only be assigned to a "Pre-Nursing" major or pathway at the time of admission to FIU. Students cannot switch into a "Pre-Nursing" major or pathway from a different major.
- To remain eligible for progression in the pre-requisite courses, students must meet the minimum requirement milestones. Students who miss any of the following milestones will be redirected out of their pre-nursing major or pathway/designation and will be ineligible to apply for full admission to the BSN program.
